To Die a Slow Death

Ben Eyes

custom made digital instrument

"To Die a Slow Death" arose from a series of serious issues I experienced including mental illness, chronic fatigue, family illness and anxiety about the state of the world. I encountered what it would be like to be alive but slowly have life taken away. Withdrawing from the world until no longer being able to function, creating music, something I have always enjoyed, was impossible.

The piece marks a return to creative life and uses microphones placed around the room passed through an unstable custom made instrument to create drones, pulses and textures from the sounds around us. Suddenly I am alive again and the world is startlingly beautiful.
