Our Environment Remixed

Iszlai

video

Jozsef chooses to shed light on our responsibilities regarding our natural environments through found sound and music. This is mainly the reason why he records the sounds of natural surroundings, nature, birds, leaves, the wind, etc. via digital means. The environment represents an infinite pool of musical ""data"", which can be recorded with microphones. Digital instruments can be created out of these recordings. Frequencies and all sound ambiances represent a particular type of rhythm, pitch, and timbre, available to us at any given time. Decoupling these sounds from their source and reframing them as music can raise awareness towards the pollution of nature, and also help avoid the environment's further deterioration.

Artist Bio

József Iszlai is a musician and sound designer residing in Budapest, Hungary. His interest lies in the possibilities of electro-acoustic compositions, plunderphonics, and sampling. After his film studies in Cluj Napoca, Romania, he worked in mixed media installations, film music, animation, and theater productions. As a musician, he contributed to acclaimed projects in Cannes, installations and sculptures in Taiwan, Spain, Germany, Portugal, led numerous workshops, and started researching the phenomenology of 20th sonic warfare.

As the alumnus of the i-Portunus grant proposed by the European Commission of 2021, he became a stable collaborator of the Orangerie Theater of Cologne, continues research within the framework of the Prague Institute of Philosophy, and is a contributing composer to projects and installations showcased in several countries around the world.
