Cyanotype Artworks

Emily Arnold Fine Art

Bringing a love of nature and photography together, Emily specialises in the photographic process of cyanotype to create unique artworks on paper, fabric, and 3D objects. She is inspired by the intricate, yet sometimes so simple, beauty of the nature all around us, as well as an interest in environmental issue and the edible and medicinal qualities of local plants (especially those thought of as 'weeds'). She sells prints and greetings cards of her artwork, as well as producing a yearly calendar, mugs and coasters with her designs on, and other unique cyanotype creations.

Artist Bio

I am an artist specialising in the photographic process of cyanotype. After studying a Fine Art degree at Loughborough University, I have focussed my artistic passions on experimenting with the cyanotype process in my home studio. I use a mixture of photo negatives and natural materials to create my imagery.

I have an interest in environmental issue and the edible and medicinal qualities of local plants (especially those thought of as 'weeds') which also inspire my work. With my camera, I enjoy capturing the beauty in nature through the seasons and can be found exploring abandoned buildings and foraging flowers and leaves to use to create my art or add to recipes.
