The Black Swan

Helen Gleave

This piece is from a series of paintings which were a response to an old school photo from 1930s Britain. The artist considered how the girls shown in it were unaware of the way their future would be upended by war, and how we would feel if this were to happen to us now.

Artist Bio

Currently a mature final year student at DMU, studying Fine Art. Have previously exhibited locally in the 2 Queens members exhibition, Leicester Sketch Club exhibition, and in Nottingham Street Art festival. My work explores narratives of individuals and the traces they leave behind.
