Blackbird and Blossom

Lucy Stevens

This original artwork shows a male blackbird perched in a tree and singing under falling cherry blossoms. The idea for the work came from Lucy's sightings of blackbirds whilst walking her border terrier, Millie, around the local village and nature reserve.

Artist Bio

Lucy Stevens is a multidisciplinary British contemporary artist whose work explores our relationship with the natural environment through vibrant coded artworks.

She draws inspiration from ornithology and colour theory. Her projects often include working in collaboration with experts in the natural world including scientists, museum curators, ornithologists, photographers and musicians.

Her work interprets birdsong, museum collections and conservation data into mixed media abstract portraits and colour charts on paper, sound works developed from gathering field recordings and most recently sculpture.
